

Truth

Truth as you know in your world is not a matter of beliefs, opinions and viewpoints. It is not something which is varied and coloured according to the concepts and perceptions of each separate individual. What each person sees as his or her own truths are not the ultimate truths but only perspectives based on personal beliefs and conditionings. The Truth is not susceptible to debates, contradictions or changes. Truth is eternal and indefatigable. No matter from which angle you perceive it, it will always appear perfect and in divine order.

Those who try to live in defiance with the cosmic Laws by justifying it with their own truths to suit their purposes of catering to the lower desires are living in a fool's paradise where they can only stand to lose out on their inner peace and happiness. The mind of man is fickle and limited. He is at the stage of infancy where he is still learning to grasp the concepts of the a-b-c of the game of life. He has yet to fully realize his true inner self and his potential as a co-creator with God. His truths and beliefs are thus construed upon little fragments of images and impressions that his undeveloped mind forms from the outside influences and life-experiences. Anything that is created from a state of lower consciousness is apt to be imperfect and impure. Therefore when you are rigid about adhering to your beliefs, you continue to vibrate at the lower frequencies; you are not doing anything constructive to raise your level of consciousness. Your old truths and beliefs stand as an obstruction to a perfectly healthy life.

No matter how deviously and convincingly you may try to wrangle your way around the eternal Truths to suit your purpose with your ignoble beliefs and half-truths, the eternal Laws will not change for you. Your efforts in resisting will exhaust you and throw you out of synchronisation with all that is harmonious so that you are ever in a state of mental wretchedness. With your erroneous beliefs and actions you are creating imperfect conditions that give rise to effects that are equally imperfect and discordant enough to cause you suffering and pain. The only way you can set yourself free from your sorrows is by living with the conscious awareness until you are capable of making correct conscious choices to bring about the positive effects, conditions and relationships in your being and world. This process is the goal of the spiritual journey and the manifestation of the Will of God. It is the evolution of consciousness.
